VERA CRUZ STATION

Mexico City Be Kept Open to Await Huerta's Downfall.
—[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Washington, Jan. 26.—President Wilson characterized as "interesting fiction" published reports that orders had been sent to Rear Admiral Fletcher to land marines at Vera Cruz and keep open road to Mexico City in case the Huerta administration collapsed.

From the White House point of view the situation in Mexico is slowly changing and the Mexican government is undergoing the "Hurtado" decay. There is no particular development or critical situation in the Mexican problem or any other foreign question, the president exclaimed today which has called him to call the senate foreign relations committee into conference tonight. A general consultation on foreign affairs is the reason for the meeting, the president making it plain that although he had tried to keep in touch with the committee heretofore.

To Meet With Russia.

It was learned incidentally that the question of a new treaty with Russia had not been broached by either country and that the subject probably would await the arrival in Petersburg of the American ambassador.

To Discuss Panama.

The American government, it is understood from the White House, is in the way to a satisfactory agreement with Colombia on the partition of the Panama Canal zone.

There are no immediate recommendations.

tion to congress is in contemplation by the president in connection with the Panama toll question. At it is expected that subject taken up at tonight's conference. The unfavorable arbitration treaties the president also expects to talk over with the senators as well as the Japanese alien land concession.

It was learned in that connection that although the question of a new treaty with Japan has been discussed in many ways, the final suggestion has come from Japan.

Relief Given.

Relief for residents in two Mexican districts from oppressive foreign aliens was granted by the state department. The governor of Colima who proposed to levy an involuntary loan has been removed. From the progress on the trouble in the state of Oaxaca, the president has directed

Baby and Young Woman Succumb,

While Youth's Parents Are in Severe Condition.
[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Milwaukee, Jan. 26.—A baby and a young woman were killed and the parents of the child were overcome and are now in a precarious condition at a hospital, as the result of inhaling fuel gas fumes while asleep at the home of the couple last night.

Miss Nettie Davie, aged 19, of Wheeler, Wis., and her nephew, William Bagemihl, 25 days old, are dead and the parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Bagemihl, were overcome.

The discovery was made by a visiting nurse who visited the flat just before noon. She nearly overcame in attempting to carry the stricken ones from the house.

Architects Held to Account.

It is unusual for a house, however small, to be erected in France without the service of an architect, who not only draws the plans, but actually supervises the work. Usually it is he who orders the building material and assures himself that its quality is up to specifications and requirements. The contractor and his workmen perform their duties in conformity with the architect's orders, and the latter, who is usually a man of capital, advances the funds required in order that the contractor need not wait for payment until the building is completed. Moreover, the French law imposes on the architect a serious responsibility, since he, as well as the contractor, is responsible for all defects of construction during a period of ten years.

GREEKS ASK JUSTICE IN PRINTED APPEALS RECEIVED IN CITY

Claim Injustice Has Been Given Nation by Recent Actions on Bulgaria Published.

Members of the local Greek colony have received copies of the Atlanta, a national daily Greek newspaper published in New York in which an appeal is made to the general public for justice to the Greek nation in view of the recent stories published by various newspapers relative to the Bulgarian claims of cruelties practiced by the Greek troops in the Balkan war. The article is as follows:

For some time past the suffering and starving masses of Bulgaria have been called to the attention and sympathies of the American public with emphasis and persistence—so be it—great suffering and distress undoubtedly exist—the consequence of terrible and devastating war and unwillingness or inability of a grasping government and a people lacking patriotism and co-ordination to grapple with conditions and bring order out of chaos. The American people give generously if she will—Greece does not ask for alms—but she is voicing her protest against the accusations of wholesale atrocities, murder and rape publicly and officially brought against her by Bulgaria. An effort to excite sympathy, and most of all, to distract attention from the proved and acknowledged atrocities committed by her troops, which shocked and incensed the whole civilized world.

By declaring themselves the victims, not the perpetrators, of unjust war, crimes and wanton destruction, they have sought to "rub the shoe on another's foot." Their activities in the broadcast dissemination of defamatory literature against the Greeks have been given unwarranted publicity and credit—unwarranted in that the dreadful results of Bulgarian atrocities are a matter of common knowledge and are at the disposal of any one who will give the time to ascertain them.

Unfortunately the "lurid allegations" proved too colorful that they were seized upon with avidity by certain journalistic interests and with no thought of the injustice involved, set forth as facts to the public. The Greek people are right—certainly indignant—they have not asked help from any other country for their destitute thousands at home—they have co-operated in strenuous self-defense to the bitter end. They expect common justice and a fair hearing from the American people. The very paper that is now conducting a campaign of vilification, passing around the hat for Bulgarian printed in its columns not six months ago the following: "With the exception of the Greeks, who observed the principles of humanity and Christian warfare, the Balkan people have shown themselves to be hordes of murderers and savages." The present attitude of this publication can not be due to any change of conviction—for the facts remain the same—due to the shame of Bulgaria, they are now a part of the history of the Nineteenth Century. The reason they must be in the sensational elements involved. Let the sympathizers with the "Heroes of the Balkans" urge their readers to help the stricken nation, but when it comes to denunciation of the responsible for the prevailing misery existing now, not only in Bulgaria but all over the Balkans, let them place the blame where it belongs or else pass silently over the tragic subject. Have they forgotten the statements of Sir Henry Grey in the House of Commons of the results of the French investigations? Yet Mr. Pichon, Minister of Foreign Affairs, unqualifiedly confirmed the accusations and the test of the Greek government against the Bulgarian army, when with the close of the second Balkan war they began their retreat the systematic slaughter of the Greek non-combatants in Macedonia and the looting and total devastation of the country. The first secretary of the French legation at Athens, acting under instructions from the home office, visited Serbia, Duxato and Nigrita immediately after evacuation by the Bulgarians. His personal report was of the most revolting nature—hundreds of defenseless Greeks have been massacred in a manner that only fiendish Tartar ingenuity could have imagined or executed. The consuls of Austria and Italy at Salonica visited Serbia, and after official inspection, the smoking ruins of the once flourishing city and the questioning of the few survivors, confirmed in every detail the righteousness of the bitter protest of the Greek government.

Even the Bulgarian inhabitants of the devastated areas have many of the insane fury of their countrymen, denouncing them as assassins and bandits who spared neither non-combatants nor their own countrymen.

The wholesale and inhuman slaughter of the Mohammedan population by the Bulgarians during the Greco-Turkish war was officially confirmed by the British foreign minister. Sir Grey, in his annual report, based on the British consular reports from Macedonia and Thrace. The minister declined, however, to make public the details of the matter, contending that consular reports were confidential and moreover that he had refused to publish reports from the same consuls concerning the massacres committed by the Turks. Nowhere is there even a question of "Greek atrocities."

The Greeks are the outposts of European civilization, of which Greece herself was the mother. Never in all her annals has she shown one evil deed of Tartar brutality. On the contrary, a national spirit of honor and idealism, a respect for the laws that were even the expression of the aspirations of the whole people have from time immemorial been hers. Her armies fought against an army barbaric in its methods—she fought beside an army even more inhuman—yet she conducted her campaign according to the rules of warfare laid down by the nations of Europe. Is she to be called a barbarian because she stood by and permit her soul to be defiled by calumny? Shame on those who would commit such injustice. Could the members of any nation save the Greek nation, be taken as his mementoes and spoils of war portions of his victims, dried in the smoke of their burning homes? Yet this was the common habit of the Bulgarian troops. On the persons of the prisoners taken by the Greeks during the last war were found innumerable such ghastly trophies—that only too graphically recorded their crimes against men, women and babies, and not only slaughter, but hideously dismembered.

A Bulgarian priest who was brought to Athens was found wearing a necklace of such unspeakable "souvenirs." This inhuman solitery seemed wholly unconscious of the enormity of their acts. On the contrary, they had looked for praise and hero worship upon their victorious return. Such, and such always, has been the concept of heroism among the Tartar clans. The

Dies of Cerebral Hemorrhage Following Fainting Spell, At Six-Thirty Near Five Points.—Leaves Large Family.

Following a fainting spell, coupled with dizziness, Herman Schumacher, age 47, and assistant car foreman of the Northwestern railway system, dropped dead this morning at six-thirty, the cause being cerebral hemorrhage. He was on his way to work, and was accompanied by George Rood, when he complained of a dizzy spell, followed by the fall, which took place in the roadway west of the Madison House. He was taken to the Northwestern passenger station, but died soon after.

Mr. Schumacher was born in this city October 6th, 1865. He has always made Janesville his home, and has been car foreman of the C. & N. W. road for the past 24 years. Up to the time of his death, he always appeared in the best of health.

Besides a wife, he leaves nine children, and a mother, and seven brothers, Ferdinand, Frank, Fred, Walter, Albert and Charles, all of this city, and Emil of Milwaukee; two sisters, Mrs. J. P. Fitch and Mrs. Rood of this city.

The announcement of the funeral will be given later.

GRADY ASPIRES TO SENATORIAL TOGA?

Prominent Portage Attorney Visits Janesville and Discusses Position.

That D. M. Grady of Portage, is going to be an important factor in the democratic race for Senator Stephenson's toga, is most certain. Mr. Grady spent Friday in Janesville, called here for legal matters, but despite which he was able to hold several conferences with leading democrats, not Avlyard Davies men, but old time democrats, in which his candidacy was discussed.

Personally Mr. Grady was not willing to talk. He said that his many friends throughout the state had urged him to make the race, to announce his candidacy at once, but that he thought best to wait before making any final decision.

"I have been approached by many of the leaders of Wisconsin democracy, urging me to become a candidate for the United States senate but thus far have refrained from doing so. Later I may, but just at present all I care to say is that I am considering it."

Despite this assertion it is certain Mr. Grady is not a candidate for long before long. He is one of the type of younger democrats, that appeals to the wheel horses who have been ignored by the Aylward-Davies crowd. County Chairman Kavelage will doubtless have charge of his campaign. Mr. Grady decides to run and it is certain he will have the backing of the majority of the democratic leaders.

DEMOCRATS REVIVED THE SPOILS SYSTEM

Seek To Give Their Party Workers
All the Offices That They Can Obtain.

By Winfield Jones.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 26.—"Back to the spoils system of Andrew Jackson," is the war-cry of the hungry House Democrats, who are wrangling over the proposal to grab 2,400 assistant postmasters from under the shield of the Civil Service and fling the jobs now held by those postmasters to the clamoring Democratic office seekers.

For a first-class piece of legislative log rolling, the pending proposition in the House of Representatives involving 2,400 assistant postmasters and $25,000,000 of road appropriations is declared to be the limit.

Stripped of disguise the proposition amounts to this: that if the House agree to take 2,400 assistant postmasters from under the protection of the civil service, and throw them into the arena of political spoils, the House can participate in dividing some $25,000,000 of good roads appropriations.

The proposition looked good; it was catching them coming and going," said some of the members. Why hadn't it been thought of before, it wasn't a trade; it was a grabbage to others.

According to the planation given by some of the insiders, the real "inside" of the maneuver is this:

When the appropriation bill was reported it carried a rider exempting these 2,400 assistant postmasters from the civil service, much to the delight of the rank and file of the faithful. But this rider was subject to a point of order, and the faithful feared a roll call in it.

Every Democrat in the House would be glad to have the thing go through, but they dreaded a showdown of a roll call.

Some of the "boys" needed urging to stand up and be counted for such a bold inroad upon cherished civil service traditions. Chairman Moore of the post office committee was equal to the occasion. Looking about him he despised the Schackelford good roads proposition.

So he tackled the Schackelford $25,000,000 good roads bill, and onto the post office bill and asked the committee on rules to report a special rule making both propositions in order. With an assistant postmastership and a slice of good roads appropriations it was thought that everybody would be armed against criticism from home.

Twenty-five million dollars for twenty-four hundred assistant postmasters is considered pretty good spoils. It is regarded as the valuation for assistant postmasters.

Even some of the Democratic House leaders could not stand for such a bald-faced and shameless steal. Representative Borland of Missouri, one of the Democratic leaders, attacked the aid as follows:

"I am strongly opposed to the provision in the post office bill removing assistant postmasters from the protection of the civil service and throwing them back again into the spoils system. In the first place, it is new legislation, which does not belong in the post office bill at all. It could not be made in order in the bill without the adoption of an arbitrary gag rule, against which democrats have repeatedly protested when they were in the minority."

"It does not simply repeal the executive order placing assistant postmasters in the classified service, but, by positive enactment it excepts them from the operation of the civil service law and gives the President no option to extend the law to them."

"It has no purpose in view except to provide jobs to be filled by political adherents who may have no qualifications for the office beyond the party service which they have rendered. In many cases the appointments would be to reward services which are not party services, but are political services to the senator or representative who is clothed with the power of making recommendations. It does not require a great stretch of the imagination to see that these services are expected to continue not in half of the political fortunes of the senator or representative through whom the appointment was secured."

TWO LILLIAN MARSDENS

By J. A. TIFFANY.

After I had been admitted to the bar, my father considering it best that I should have the opportunity of gaining experience in a large city before entering his own office, I went west, where I became associated with a law firm, the head of which was an old college friend of father's.

Mr. Marsden impressed me at first as my beau ideal of a man; while Mrs. Marsden was one of those matronly ladies, with a certain old-world courtliness of manner, sweet and endearing. There was a son, named Fred, about two years older than I, who appeared to be a jolly good fellow.

"Lillian," said Mrs. Marsden, as a young lady entered the room, "this is Mr. Donald Fairchild. My daughter, Donald."

Miss Marsden and I shook hands. "This is Lillian's twentieth birthday," Mrs. Marsden observed, evidently for the purpose of relieving my embarrassment. "She is our only daughter, Mr. Fairchild."

"I am sure, Miss Marsden," I said, finding my tongue at last, "I wish you many very happy returns of your birthday."

It would be impossible to convey any adequate idea of the unalloyed delight of my first few days in the city. At the end of a week I had accomplished three things: I had secured nice room for my private quarters; been assigned a place in the offices of the firm, to which I was admitted as a junior partner, and fallen head over ears in love.

Mr. and Mrs. Marsden must have known how things were going, but the knowledge appeared to cause them no uneasiness.

I had been here about six months, when I was entrusted with a commission that took me to Massachusetts—which, by the way, was the place where Mr. Marsden first became acquainted with his wife. It was there that they were married.

My business was to look up the title to certain real estate in Boston, and to obtain authenticated records proving the validity of a client's claim thereto.

Before starting on my journey, I declared my passion to Lillian, and became her accepted suitor, with the approval of her parents.

At the end of three days I had finished my search in Boston and armed myself with certified copies of the entries discovered.

But—alas, for my success! I had found something else—something for which I was not looking—something that took all the interest out of my mission and made life seem a hideous mockery and burden.

Standing out, as if written in letters of fire borrowed from the nether regions, I found this entry in the record of births in Boston.

"December 14, 1860—Lillian Agnes, daughter of John and Katherine Marsden."

And this was January, 1896! My affianced, who had been introduced to me on her twentieth birthday, six months ago, was a charming damsel of thirty-six!

When I reached the office on my return to the west, I found Fred busy poring over a pile of musty documents.

"Glad to see you back, Don," he said, "I'm just looking over some interesting family papers. Father is at work on our genealogical history. I suppose you know we came over in the Mayflower?"

"I wasn't aware of it," I replied; "but you wouldn't surprise me if you told me you came over in the ark. How did your sister stand the voyage?"

"What the deuce is the matter with you, Fairchild?" Marsden asked, coloring.

"Well—don't you see—this paper proves she is thirty-six?" Marsden whistled, and then he laughed.

"Look here, Don," he said; "I think I ought to break your neck, instead of laughing at you—but it's too absurd. My parent's first child was a girl, who was christened Lillian Agnes. I was born nine years later; and five years after that came another girl. Lillian was a favorite name with my father; and the first child having died in infancy, they decided to revive the name. Accordingly, the second daughter was christened Lillian."

And I gave my head two or three good bangs against the wall. After which, I felt better.

Where He Was Welcome. Picking himself up after a rapid flight down the stairs, the young man broke forth:

"Of course, it is your privilege to throw me out of the house, Mr. Roughman," he said, "but there is no need of adding insult to injury by having me land on a mat which has the word 'Welcome' woven in it."

"There is nothing wrong in that," remarked the cause of his sudden descent, "you are welcome."

"But you threw me out!"

"—on the outside of the house, where the mat lies, sir!" concluded the man of the house, closing the window.

On the Make. Effie's Brother—"Do you love my sister Effie?"

Effie's Steady Company—"Why Willie, that is a queer question. Why do you want to know?"

Effie's Brother—"She said last night she would give a dollar to know and I'd like to scoop it in.—Puck."

DRAFTING DRASTIC ANTI-TRUST BILLS

Representative Clayton.

As a result of conferences between Chairman Clayton, of the house judiciary committee, Representative Carlin of Virginia, chairman of the trust subcommittee, and Representatives Floyd of Arkansas, McCoy of New York, and others, important anti-trust bills have been drafted and will be introduced soon in the lower house. They cover these points:

Interlocking directorates. Trade relations and prices. Injunction proceedings and damage suits by individuals.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

January 26, 1914.—The cold wave that appeared in the Canadian northwest on Saturday has moved eastward with great rapidity and is now off the New England coast. It was attended by temperatures below zero along the northern border.

Another great barometric depression now occupies the northwest, its center being in the Columbia basin, where the barometer has fallen below 29 inches. Snow has fallen throughout the entire country with the exception of small areas in the southwest and on the middle Atlantic coast. The temperature is rising on the plains and local chinooks are the source of unusually high temperatures along the front of the Rockies.

Crestfall in Barometer.

A curious barometer is used by the remnant of the Araucanian race, which inhabits the southernmost province of Chile. It consists of the cast-off shell of a crab. The shell is white in fair, dry weather, but the approach of a moist atmosphere is indicated by the appearance of small red spots. If the moisture in the air increases sufficiently, the shell becomes entirely red.

Before and After.

When a girl is engaged to a man she believes him when he tells her he would love to have her walk on him with her tiny feet; after she is married to him she would be satisfied to have him willing to put her rubbers on her without acting as if it were killing him.

FEATURE AT THE APOLLO
For Tuesday and Wednesday the Apollo announces the big three-part feature entitled "The Streets of New York."

If you went to New York and spent six months, of your time you could not see as much as is shown you in this great play of every-day life in America's greatest city.

Introductory to the story you will be taken on a trip through the most interesting parts of New York, showing you the homes of the millionaires, as well as the homes of the poor, where thousands are crowded in the tenements, not like humans, but as a lot of cattle; Broadway in all its glory,

In this vicinity the approach of the disturbance in the west will be attended by increasing southerly winds, rising temperature and rain or snow.

COMING HOME TO ROOST.
Under this caption the Wall Street Journal discusses the actions of the democratic party in seeking to redeem its pre-election promises.

"One of those reckless promises which the democratic party has implied in its legislation and administration is coming home to roost." It has been widely assumed that where an independent manufacturer cannot operate with success, he must not blame his own inefficiency, even if other independents make no complaint. All he has to do is to seek the democratic attorney general, who is expected to hobble more formidable competitors, on a general charge of conspiracy in restraint of trade.

"It was possible for the courts to dissolve the American Tobacco Trust, so called, into its constituent parts, Congress and the president and the supreme court rolled together cannot make those constituent parts compete if they do not choose to do so. It is amusing to read in the news that independent manufacturers complain of the opposition of the American Tobacco Co., P. Lorillard, and the Liggett & Myers Co., because they decline to compete with each other.

"These constituent parts of the reformed tobacco trust have been trained in the same school. They look at trade matters in about the same way. They know they can conduct business successfully by their highly expert method, which even the court could not eradicate. They do not propose to compete with each other if there is nothing to be gained. Some day they will do so, no doubt, as the old stockholders die off and the managements change. But in the meantime the incompetent competitor outside the alleged 'trust ring' has about as poor a chance as he ever had, or ever will have until he learns to stand on his own feet without propping from Washington.

"Congress is fond of digging up its newly planted radishes to see how they grow. It did this with the Interstate Commerce Court. It thought it could re-establish cut-throat competition in tobacco and oil by a resolution in the two houses or a decree of the supreme court. The horse has been led to water, but he declines to drink. Only the slow processes of time will establish differences of opinion and policy between the constitution parts of the American Tobacco company, sufficient to induce them to compete with each other.

"But what a particularly awkward chicken to come home to roost! Further legislation will not help the democratic party to redeem its promises. The more you change companies so situated, the more they will remain the same thing."

MANGLING THE CONSTITUTION.
Indifference on the part of the average voter of the state to any proposed constitutional amendment that comes up at the various election times, often causes such amendments to become laws simply through neglect. Last general election the question of permitting the state to condemn or buy property in Madison for a parkway to the state capitol, was voted on favorably. In fact, Rock county was the only county that voted against the project and they did so because it was brought to the attention of the voters prominently. The Madison Democrat calls attention to a series of amendments that are to be voted on at the election this next November and suggests that the voters vote "no" on the whole proposition. They list them as follows:
One scheme is to make amendment of the constitution easier.
Kill it!
Another is to introduce the Initiative and referendum.
Kill it! These fads are importations from Oregon where public sentiment is said to be forming to their discredit.
A third is to permit the state to "grant annuities and insurance."
Kill it!
Then there is a plan to recall public officers.
Kill it! They can be recalled at the next regular election or, if crooked, be expelled from office as Sulzer was.

Again, increase of legislators' pay from $500 a term to $1,200 is projected. Electors need not be advised on that issue. If a session were a hundred days long, as it should be and would be if faddists, visionaries and job-makers were debased in Wisconsin, existing compensation would not be inadequate. It goes without saying that able solons will not appear at the capitol in consequence of any increased pay.

Yet another project is to authorize the legislature to decrease the number of judicial circuits (it never will), and to permit more than one judge to a circuit. Possibly some rational excuse may be back of this notion, but the probability is that if the door is opened, as designed, we shall at once get more judges and not fewer circuits—to just what advantageous end is more or less obscure. Should we not kill it too?
So we say, vote "no" mostly and if in doubt vote "no" throughout. Jockeying with the constitution is a pastime which greatly needs discouragement.

Probably by perseverance and devotion to study some of the office boys who start in a Detroit automobile factory at $30 a week may in time become college professors at $1,200 a year.

Heart to Heart Talks

By CHARLES N. LURIE.

THE POISONER OF THE FLOWERS.
You may not be a lover of flowers. There are persons who are indifferent to the beauty that lies in the delicate formation of a petal and the glorious coloring of the blooms. They are to be pitied, not blamed.

But are you a poisoner of flowers? What, you ask, a poisoner of flowers? Who ever heard of such a being?

Well, an English flower grower did, for one. He has not only heard of him, but has felt the heavy hand of his malignancy. For eight years a miscreant has poisoned the flowers of this man, causing them to droop and wither on their stems. Not even the finest and rarest of blooms have been safe from the flower hater who places poison at their roots.

It has been suggested that the evil-doer hates not the flowers, but the man who grows them, and takes this means of avenging himself for wrongs, real or imagined.

But why poison the flowers? Whoever kills a flower destroys beauty which the world needs. Whoever rears a wall around his flowers, so that others may not see and enjoy their beauty, is indulging his selfishness.

There are figurative flowers of life, such as hope and faith and charity and benevolence and right thinking. There are persons great of soul who cultivate them, sometimes in the very soil of discouragement and disappointment.

And there are others who poison them. At their roots they spread the venom of disparagement and unbelief and sneers. They see the flowers of life trying to rear themselves in the glory of the sunlight and to spread around the odor of beauty and helpfulness. They take a malicious delight in blighting the flowers.

Be not among such. If you see around you the flowering of life, the development of beautiful lives passed amid scenes unfitted for them, if you see the smile of hope and helpfulness blossoming on the countenances that might be excused for bearing only weeds, add your word of cheer to the sunshine that radiates from within, if not from without.

So shall you do something to advance the world.

On the Spur of the Moment

Obscurity.
He was so very modest. He couldn't bear the sight of his name in the papers. He hated the spotlight. He was a shrinking creature, a modest violet. Obscurity he longed for. And all that he could get. He shunned the public notice. And fought shy of the throng. "Please let me sleep," was always the burden of his song. He figured on a method to reach his ideal life. Removed far from all glory and bickering and strife. He was so very bashful. He was afraid of fame. He didn't want the public. He never heard his name. An idea, heaven sent. He had himself elected. To be vice president.

The Auction Wedding.
One of the small state papers published an item this week which was a weird mixup of an account of a wedding and an auction notice. The most interesting part of the item follows: "William Smith, the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Smith, and Miss Lucy Anderson were disposed of at public auction at my early one mile east in the presence of seventy guests, including two mules and twelve head of cattle.

For the parties, over $1,250 pounds on the hoof. The beautiful home of the bride was decorated with one of the bride's rakes, one feed griddle and two sets of work harness, nearly new, and just before the ceremony was pronounced the Mendel & Sons wedding march was rendered by one milch cow, five years old, one jersey cow and one sheep, who, carrying a bunch of bride's roses in her hand was very beautiful. She wore one light spring wagon, two crates of apples, three racks of hay, one grindstone of mouseline desole and trimmed with about one hundred bushels of apuds. The bride couple left yesterday on an extended trip. Terms spot cash."

LARGEST ARMORY IS FINISHED AT COLLEGE

Immense Structure Would Hold Chicago Coliseum in One Drill Room
—Champaign, Ill., Drills.
(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Champaign, Ill., Jan. 26.—The biggest armory building in the world—Chicagoans gasp when you tell them the Coliseum would be lost in its single drill room—being built by the University of Illinois here today stands nearly completed. Its cost is about $250,000, and it will accommodate more than 2,000 cadets in man-eaters.

The structure is unique in other respects than its size. It has no rear walls. The roof extends four feet into the ground and rests on concrete and steel bases. The building is a giant half cylinder. The whole frame-work consists of forty steel arches, placed ten feet apart, each 100 feet high in the center and spanning 200 feet of ground. This building is 200 by 400 feet and has a floor space of 80,000 square feet without an obstructing interior pillar. This is to be supplemented by officers and equipment rooms at the sides.

That the building has not been planned on too large a scale is shown by the fact that the university squads already consist of 4,700 cadets.

The immense armory has attracted much attention from other universities. The Minnesota and Ohio state universities have sent delegations to inspect it, and others have sent inquiries about its plans. It is reported that the Seventh Regiment of New York City will have a larger armory, plans for which have not yet been drawn.

LUMBERING STARTS IN NORTHERN WOODS

Modern "Lumberjacks" Change From Characters Painted in Adventure Novels
(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Antigo, Wis., Jan. 26.—The woodsman, or lumberjack, as he is better known, has begun to come out of the timber. Hundreds of laborers in the forests of northern Wisconsin are arriving here and branching out for other parts of the state. The lumbermen are leaving early this year on account of the extraordinary mildness of the winter. Cutting for the most part has ceased because, owing to the advance of sufficient snow and the obbers for the season, will be so shortened that they will be unable to move even the logs already cut to the mills and loading sidings. Consequently the sawyers have no more work to do and will not have until there is a providential and heavy fall of snow.

The evolution of the "lumberjack" has been especially marked this year. The popular conception of him is no longer correct. The old-time sawyer came to the woods in the fall, sawed down trees, skidded and decked logs, worked like a horse and ate as heartily and let his beard grow until the end of the cutting season. Then he went to the nearest settlement and proceeded to make a history. Stirring tales still are told of the "hussies" who traveled alone and who fought for the love of fighting. In the old days, when a lumberjack came out of the woods his first act was to shave and shave and shave and then two drinks. Then he sallied out to paint the community a deep, dark crimson. And he usually succeeded admirably.

The end of the interval of idleness between the completion of the cutting and the beginning of the log driving found the lumberjack broke, afflicted with an aching head, sometimes in jail but ready to return to work.

On breaking up of winter and the clearing of ice from Indian garden bands found the woodsmen back on the job again for the "spring drive." The winter's cutting was simple compared to the labor of moving the logs down the river and for weeks members of the "lost legion of the north" coiled took their lives in their hands to bring the "drive" to its destination on time. Clad in hob-nailed brogans and wielding "pike-poles" and "peevies" the lumberjack piloted millions of feet of lumber down the river on the crest of the spring freshets. Log jams were daily occurrences, and hundreds lost their lives in passing rapids and going through narrow channels where the swollen stream were swift and treacherous. The end of the drive meant another visit to the barber and the quenching of the long neglected thirst, and at the close of the spring debauch the lumberjacks lost themselves until the sawing season began again the next fall, finding employment in the sawmills, on farms, and railroads, and even shipping as seamen on lake vessels.

Here and there are still to be found the old-time lumberjacks, but the modern lumberjack is far from being a romantic figure. He is disposed to live quietly and peaceably, and the chances are the opportunities for saving money is what called him into the woods. Many lumberjacks are in the woods for their health. Hundreds of men are attracted by the opportunity of making good wages and the absence of temptation to spend them.

Log drives in Wisconsin are practically at an end, their place having been taken by tramways and ice roads built in the winter. Nor is logging now confined entirely to winter. Many jobs cut timber during the spring and summer and give their employees steady year-round work.

Fabric Practically Everlasting.
The Russians manufacture a fabric from the fiber of a filamentous stone from the Siberian mines which is said to be of so durable a nature that it is practically everlasting. The material is soft to the touch and pliable in the extreme, and has only to be thrown into a fire when dirty to be made absolutely clean.

Epithet and Epitaph.
The difference between an epithet and an epitaph is that one is applied to a man before he is dead and the other after.

PROFESSORS' SURVEY REPORT IS MADE

Interesting Indian Relics Found at Headwaters of Wisconsin River, —Many Are Destroyed.
(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., Jan. 26.—Important Indian finds have been made in northern Wisconsin according to accounts being published by the Wisconsin Archeological society, two members of which made investigations in Portage, Marathon and Lincoln counties during July, 1913.

J. P. Schumacher of Green Bay and W. A. Titus of Fond du Lac, made a study of the aboriginal remains about Vaseau, Merrill, Romahawk, Escanaba and other places along the upper Wisconsin river. Near Bradley and Heaford surveys were made of six distinct groups of Indian earthworks, of which there have been no previous state records. The largest of these consists of 33 conical and oval mounds. An embankment mound in one of the groups is the only one of its kind as yet located in Northern Wisconsin. It is over sixty miles north of the northern limit of the effigy mound territory.

At this place there exists also a fine plot of old Indian garden bands as yet located in the north. The investigators were chiefly confined to the regions about Lakes Emily and Onneland, near each of which important discoveries were made.

The investigators call attention to the rapid disappearance through civilization and the development of water-power of the state's prehistoric and historic Indian remains. Scores of interesting mounds and valuable relic-stores have been rifled by destructive curio seekers. The state society is endeavoring to obtain surveys and other records before the few remaining are destroyed.

Joe Tinker said a hot word or two about Mr. Ebbets the other day. In fact it might be said that Joe just told Charlie where to disembark. that amount. If he'd have gone ahead with the deal like a regular person and not tried to make me look like a boob he might have had my contract in his safe today. What yuh got to say to that, Charlie?

E. W. Dickerson, president of the Michigan State league, believes that six clubs are enough and plenty for the average minor league. There is pretty always sure to be two losers in an eight-club minor league circuit and the six-club idea is only sensible, says Mr. Dickerson. Louis Hielbrunner, president of the Central league, declares this to be the case and points out that they prospered remarkably after dropping two weak clubs. They'll all come to it as times goes on.

The real reason why so many fighters say they are as good as ever and will be able to come back and win the old bay leaves seems to be because they are working out in the gym when they say it. Most anyone can work a while in the gym and begin to feel that he can knock the can off the fiercest fighter that ever lived. While working out in the gym they never try the muscles and the heart to the utmost, as is done in an earnest fight. Corbett was sure that he was as good as ever when he tried his second time at Jeffries. And he probably did feel fine in the gym. But when it came to the big fight he wasn't there. Ad Wolgast probably thinks today that he is as good as he was when in his heyday—when he could storm through twenty hard rounds and scarcely draw a long breath. He may feel that way about it while bawling his sparring partner about, but somehow he surely lacks the stuff in a real encounter.

Clark Griffith, when in quest of a brilliant player sends his youngster to the Atlanta club, which is one of Washington's farms. Atlanta generally spurns the services of Griffith's cast-offs, the kids ramble to another club, make good and then the sly manager signs up Joe Boelling and Paul Musser are two notables who received this parcel post treatment.

Mordcaai Brown and Joe Tinker have both come to the public press and explained just why it was that they were willing and eager to leave the Reds for the Feds. An insufficiency of space inhibits the publication here of their complete remarks. However, the substance of same will be hauled forth. Joe says: "I don't regret the move. I did it for the exceedingly human reason that I was able thus to better my circumstances and my mode of life with a faster wage. Also, I don't mind saying that I had not been receiving the treatment that a gentleman in baseball is accustomed to receive." Mordcaai Brown will now change because it was the only sensible thing to do. More money and a more congenial situation. Had I gone back to the Reds next season I would probably have been offered a salary cut. Also while there last year I was certainly not given the best of treatment. Those who know me will be sure that I would not have made the move had I not been convinced that it was the thing to do. And I greatly rejoice over it."

PROFESSIONAL EVIL GAINS ENTRANCE IN COLLEGE ATHLETICS

Question of Summer Baseball and Professional Gridiron Men Hard One For Athletic Boards.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

New York, January 25.—That "summer baseball," the most important issue in current college athletics, is not a modern sportsman's evil is attested by a modern sportsman in a treatise recently prepared on this subject. He writes: "The testimony of experience is strongly against the practicability of 'summer baseball' in the early days of the diamond decade of the '20s, eastern college stars were in great demand by the professional teams, for in that period, the college nine, particularly Harvard, Princeton and Yale, were superior to the city nines. For a time there was no objection to the collegians playing with the professionals during the summer vacation, although the former openly were paid for their services. In the spring of 1879, however, two famous college players from the same institution, who after graduation were playing with a great city nine, suddenly left the professional team, re-entered their college nine from the rear to the front in the intercollegiate campaign. "This spectacular occurrence naturally centered attention upon the subject of professionalism. As a result of the agitation which followed, six colleges, namely, Amherst, Brown, Dartmouth, Harvard, Princeton and Yale met in the old Massachusetts House at Springfield, December 6, 1879, for the purpose of drafting a common eligibility rule. It was possible to form a baseball league. Their deliberations eventually produced both. The rule adopted on that occasion ran as follows:

Amateur Rules.

"Any student who has been in regular attendance for the whole of any college year in any department shall be eligible in that year for the nine. Any student who after this date shall play upon a professional team or who shall play for money shall not be eligible."

It was not long, however, before rumors were rife of padded expense accounts of highly valuable gifts, of high salaried commercial positions which no service was required, and even of secret pay-rolls. Not only were the collegians embroiled in charges and counter-charges but the partisans of these summer teams likewise joined the line and cry. The divided allegiance of some of the latter led them to furnish secretly to their college proots of the professionalism of rival collegians.

Football Suffers. "Curiously, it was football that suffered most from the ensuing storm, due to the double fact that the football season followed baseball and that the star of the diamond usually was a star of the gridiron. Thus the fall of 1889 found the old American Football Association, which had founded and nurtured the inter-collegiate game, once again in a row over charges of professionalism which had arisen in 'summer baseball,' a row that eventually followed by similar controversies among the various institutions forming dual leagues in athletics and the breaking of inter-collegiate relations made a great din during the early years of the decade of the '90s. The bitterness of the rival student bodies extended to the alumni and to the faculties. Thus the condition became intolerable.

On Business Stand. "Up to this time college faculties had regarded competitive athletics as exclusively a matter of student management. They now perceived, however, that the institution had reached a stage of evolution when it was as much a matter of faculty supervision as any department of instruction or business administration. With the adoption of this theory on the subject reform began."

Colleges Successful. The unusual strength developed by the so-called smaller colleges, football teams of last season is still a subject of much discussion by students of the game. M. J. Thompson, one of the leading officials and authorities on football in an analysis of the situation states: "There are several very satisfactory reasons that might be offered to explain the football equality which at present exists between the large and small colleges. The large universities must by reason of their football policy retain a conservative style of play. The smaller colleges on the other hand more readily adapt themselves to the changes in the rules and are consequently able to offer more surprises in offense play than their big brothers can offset by their more ponderous team work. Then, too, the small institutions have everything to gain and nothing to lose by employing these new tactics.

Play Open Games. "If they lose it is no discredit to them but if they win or even tie, great glory is theirs, and their victory is nearly always the result of often their reckless application. Their style is always characterized by quick, snappy plays, the frequent use of the forward pass and, when it was legal, the onside kick. The large universities, however, so safely employ these tactics. They must be conservative, they can take no chances, they must win as the result of less brilliant plays and more faultless team work, so when an ordinarily weaker team offers a good defense and a bewildering number of open plays, the rightful victor must lose."

Jap Team Coming.

Arrangements for the United States tour of the Keio University baseball team of Tokyo, Japan, are being completed and the 1914 invasion of the Japanese collegians promises to be the most pretentious since the inauguration of these international baseball series. During the past year Keio played the University teams of Stanford and Washington and the Giants-White Sox combination on Japanese diamond. As a result the Nippon nine is really a formidable team from a college standpoint and is securing places upon the schedules of the larger universities. According to Nat Strong, the New York representative of Keio University, the Japanese team comes to America at the invitation of Stanford University. The squad will arrive on the Pacific coast early in April and after finishing the coast schedule will leave for extended eastern tour. Games are being scheduled with the strongest 'varsity' nines of the middle west, east and south and the team will not return to the Orient until July.

BELOIT VICTORIOUS OVER LAKE FOREST

Little Five Collegians From Line City Double Score on Illinois Men.

Score 27 to 13.

Beloit College basketball five luckily won the Saturday night game against Lake Forest College five at the Line City gymnasium. Coach Evans of the Beloit quintet predicted a defeat at first owing to the sickness of Willford, a star guard. Willford featured on his free throwing. Joe Ryan and Ray Edler, both local men, won applause by their heady work. Ryan scored five baskets from guard while Edler, playing at center, a position which he cannot get acquainted with very easily, scored twice. Korst was not in the lineup. The lineup and score follows: Beloit—Capt. Ward, 1 f.; Cornell, 2 f.; Edler, c.; Willford, 1 g.; Ryan, 1 g. Lake Forest—E. Krueger 1 f.; Eklin, 1 f.; Stokes, c.; J. Krueger, 1 g.; Gray, 1 g. Baskets—Cornell 2, Ryan 5, Edler 2, Ward 2, E. Krueger 2, Stokes 2. Free Throws—Willford 5, E. Krueger 3. Referee—Gardner. Timekeeper—Larson.

BADGERS TAKE GAME FROM MAROON FIVE

Coach Meanwell's Title Contenders Win Hardest Game of Season, Saturday, by Score of 16 to 14.

Before a crowd of 3,000 enthusiastic rooters that lined the four sides of Bartlett gymnasium, Chicago, Saturday night, the Badger basketball five trimmed the Maroons 16 to 14. Although the score stood close there was not the slightest hesitation in the line of arguments to come out and say that the Chicago team were completely overshadowed by Coach Meanwell's green material. The Maroons threatened once in the first half to take the lead by making the score stand a tie. The Badgers took a brace and the work of Capt. Van Gent, Harper and Hass practically clinched the game for Wisconsin. Nelson Norgren starred for Chicago. His team failed to back him up in tight places and that in a small part accounts for the Badger victory. The George Watson.

It is likely that George Watson, the heavy hitting outfielder with St. Joseph, Mo., in the Western league, will not get an opportunity this year to make good with the Pittsburgh Pirates, to whom he was sold. Watson broke his leg early last summer, and although the break is apparently mended now, the big player is afraid to go into fast company until he is sure that he is all right.

lineups and score is as follows: Wisconsin—Sands, 1 f.; Hass, 1 f.; Capt. Van Gent, c.; Lange, 1 g.; Harper 1 g. Chicago—Goettler Norgren, 1 f.; Stegeman, Shull, 1 f.; Des Jardien, c.; Baumgartner 1 g.; Molander, George, 1 g. Baskets—Norgren 4, Stegeman, Harper 2, Lange 3, Hass, Van Gent, Free Throws—Molander, George 3, Harper 2. Time of Halves, 20 minutes. Referee—Diddle. Umpire—Reiman.

FURTHER TECHNIQUE OF BASKETBALL TO BE TAUGHT LOCALS

High School Quintet Need a Revival of Last Year's Team Work.

—Basket Shooting Good.

Broken, loose and spasmodic teamwork has been the work of the Janesville high school basketball quintet during the year so far, and this week is going to require Coach Curtis' hard-est coaching in the line of instruction. The regulars are sadly in need of good passing, and more accurate basket shooting. There is too much loafing, too much weakness on the part of the men, which conditions must be altered and altered quick, if the local school is to be represented by a title aggregation this year. Only to have a revival of the teamwork that prevailed last year and Curtis would be satisfied that his men could be depended upon in a real game.

Short passing will be the feature of instruction from now on. The team have played loosely in the past. One night they would not play at all, another night they would use the long pass and depend upon each other for the hard work. Still it has been noticed that while the locals have the ball a part of the time, that is enough, on the men, and they, themselves, are now determined to fight in hopes of making a record to be proud of. Stoughton is scheduled for a game at the Swedish town Friday night of this week. An open date next week, and then Madison comes to this city.

Stickney will be used in practice this week, as will Barnes, Badger, Richards and more of the substitute material. A change in the lineup may still be made in any of the five positions.

The greener men will be pitted to play against Atwood, Hemming and Dalton during the various workouts, which means that they will have their hands full trying to follow the old and experienced men.

Practice was held this afternoon for fully two hours. Scrimmage was not in full bloom because the lecture given the men lasted for a long period. Curtis is determined to make a team out of the material which will stand a lot from an experienced five such as Madison, are Benway, Madison's star forward, will have plenty of trouble in scoring over Datto, who has been shifted to guard recently. On the whole, the locals are preparing for their hardest game of the year when they meet Madison, and it is a question of local guarding that will figure in a victory and not merely basket shooting.

Occupation for Women.

Two women, maybe more, occupy novel positions in the business world in New York. These women are employed by a number of wholesale dress goods and millinery houses to entertain women buyers from out of town.
They entertain the visitors at dinner, in the theater, and make the sojour-ners' stay in New York pleasant. The expense, of course, is charged to the houses employing them. The individual charges of these women entertainers usually are about one-fourth of the total expense.

Latest Idea in Rope.

A company has patents covering a rope made of several strands of paper covered with galvanized steel wire.
The rope thus produced is strong,
tough and flexible, suitable for clothes lines and such uses. It is claimed that a rope of this kind will withstand the action of the weather 50 per cent longer than cotton.

HE MENDS THE SHOES OF THE PRESIDENTS

F. Sumner in his shop.

F. Sumner is the Washington cobbler who mends the shoes of the presidents. His tiny shop is located not far from the White House and some of his best customers have been the presidents and their families.
McKinley was his first presidential patron and all the rest have followed suit. T. R., he says, was his best customer, but it took more leather to fix the footgear of President Taft.
McKinley, he says, was a good customer, but the shoes were square toed, and Roosevelt had a liking for tan shoes. President Wilson wears lighter weight shoes than any of his predecessors.

WARDS OFF THE TEREDO

The Little Borer Which Destroys Boats and Submarine Structures.

The teredo is the little giant which upsets the great works of mankind. In the Pacific Ocean its ravages are particularly disastrous, and all boats or submarine structures are attacked by this little pest and soon destroyed. All wharves and similar structures of the Pacific must be renewed every four years on account of the ravages of the teredo. If this is not attempted to utter destruction takes place a little later.

A teredo-proof pile has recently been patented by a resident of the Pacific Coast which is said to keep the tiny

TEREDO-PROOF PILE FOR WHARVES

destroyers at bay. A series of oblique passages is bored through the pile in opposite directions to criss-cross the grain of the wood, the ends of the said passages being connected by a continuous bore. The hole is filled with a preparation which not only preserves the wood from the action of the water, but also effectually keeps the teredo from working its way through the wood.

SCIENCE NOTES.

The strength of tungsten filaments has increased more than 300 per cent, since 1908, and the strength of drawn wire has increased 40 per cent, since 1911. The use of chemicals in the bulb, which has become general during the past year, has reduced the life of the lamps to a marked degree and has made possible a substantial reduction in bulb size for several lamps, thus reducing manufacturing costs and broadening the application of the lamps. The introduction of coiled filaments makes possible many new forms of lamps which heretofore could not be manufactured.

Among the articles which have been recently patented is a paper raincoat invented by two men of Marseilles, Ill. The coat is formed from a single piece of waterproof paper. In making the coat a blank is formed from any suitable waterproof material such as oil paper. The blank has a body portion and lateral sleeve forming portions. An opening with suitable lap and collar portion is provided with a slit extending to the skirt of the garment, and suitable fastenings are applied for holding the garment closed. The coat can be easily carried in a handbag, or in a package.

The rapid displacement of the belt as a means of transmitting power is not only resulting in a great saving of energy in the workshops of the world, but also is a great saving of life for the use of the belt has always been attended by injury and loss of life to a serious degree.
The electric drive, by removing all this,
Although the United States is the pioneer in the development of motor-driven machinery, it appears that Germany is at present leading in the extent of its use for driving machinery. An electrically driven machine is rarely seen in that country.

The American consul at Zurich recently made a report of a new process of preserving eggs which has been brought out in that country and which has attracted a great deal of attention because of its convenience and economy. It is said that the materials from which the preservative is made may be had in almost any country and are nowhere expensive.
In the treatment of the eggs a flat vessel of about 100 quarts is filled to half its capacity with the preserving agent. Into which the eggs are dipped for two minutes and then allowed to dry. For the dipping process the eggs are placed in flat wire baskets, each with a capacity of 300 to 500 eggs. One basket is dipped after the other, and by employing a larger vessel several baskets may be dipped simultaneously. In this manner two or three persons can dip 200,000 eggs per day. The process is said to be much superior to cold storage and it is said that the coating is good for nine months and the eggs lose none of the qualities of the fresh egg.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

WHERE WOMEN COUNT.

"If I wish I were a man," I heard a girl say the other day, "they count for something in the world. When they want things they get them. What women want is only a secondary consideration. Now it seems to me that this girl expressed a rather common point of view among women, and a distinctly wrong one. Women don't realize their own influence; they don't realize how largely the world is run for them."

For one thing, newspapers are written for women. The big advertiser with the newspaper with the largest number of women readers, and as the advertiser pays about five times as much toward the production of the paper as the reader, the editor must try to please the advertiser by pleasing women.

Hotels are built for women. Go into a man's club and see how different its arrangements and decorations are from those of a hotel. "The chief reason I prefer to stop at a club," a business man once said to me, "is that the rooms in the club are planned and furnished with reference to a man's convenience, while the average hotel room is meant for a woman. Exactly what do I mean by that? Well, for one thing, the chairs in a hotel room are usually foolish little spring-legged things that will hardly hold a good sized man. Then the lighting is arranged so as to give the best light to the bureau, while desk is struck off in any dark corner. And look at the kind of a desk they give you, a dainty little note paper affair with no room to write a good sized business letter on it, and one of those little spindle chairs in front of it. There's never any place to hang a razor stop in the bathroom, and the beds are all covered with feminine flummydiddles. No, sir, I'll never stop at a hotel when I can get a real man's room at the club."

In like manner the guest rooms in our homes are furnished for women. How many guest rooms contain a shaving mirror, apertures for smoking, a man's sized arm chair, or any distinctively masculine conveniences. Plays are written for women. No theatrical producer would ever bring out a play which he did not think would appeal strongly to women, and the plenty of plays which men do not care for, have long and prosperous runs. These are a few examples of the strength of the weaker sex in influencing the affairs of the world. After all, it isn't entirely bad to be a woman, is it? Of course we do not have the freedom and opportunity that men do, but we certainly do "count" for something in the world. In fact, I might say we count for considerably more.

"They talk about a woman's sphere. As though it had a limit. There's not a place in earth or Heaven, There's not a task to mankind given, There's not a blessing or a woe That's not a whisper away or no. That has a feather's weight of worth Without a woman in it."

THE KITCHEN CABINET

CHEERINESS is a thing to be more profoundly grateful for than all that genius ever inspired or talent ever accomplished. Next best to natural, spontaneous cheeriness, is deliberate, intended and persistent cheeriness which we create, can cultivate and can so foster and cherish that after a few years the world will never suspect that it was not an hereditary gift.

—Helen H. Jackson.

SOME GOOD DISHES.

A banana brown betty prepared as one does the chopped apple, using banana instead. Put a layer of buttered crumbs in the bottom of a baking dish, cover with a layer of sliced bananas; repeat, adding a little sugar and nutmeg, then pour over the juice of a sour orange. Add a bit of water and bake.

Cheese Cakes.—Grate the peel of three lemons, cook until tender, letting the water boil away. Beat the yolks of six eggs and mix with a quarter of a pound of sugar and a half pound of butter, two tablespoonsful of grated cheese and the lemon peel. Line patty tins with pie crust and fill with the mixture, and bake for half an hour.

Green Pepper and Potato Croquettes.—Take a cupful and a half of mashed potatoes and mix with it, a tablespoonful of butter, the yolk of an egg, salt, pepper and enough milk to moisten. Mold it into croquettes and make a hole in each. Into this hole put some chopped green pepper that has been fried slightly in butter. Dip the croquettes in egg and crumbs, then fry in deep fat.

Royal Christmas Cream.—Take a pound of warm fondant and work into it chopped nuts, raisins, figs, dates and orange peel. Knead until soft, then press into a cake; when cold cut in slices. Wrap in waxed paper, serve for dessert or a confection.

Choice Butter Caramels.—Put a cupful of sugar, a half pound each of glucose and butter with a cupful of cream, over the fire to boil. Cook until a test in cold water makes a soft, waxy ball. The time of boiling varies, often it will take an hour. Pour out into buttered tins, and when cold mark in squares.

Dublin Cookies.—Take a half cupful each of lard and butter, add one and a fourth cupfuls of sugar, one cupful of sour milk, two eggs, one teaspoonful of nutmeg, one teaspoonful of soda, two cupfuls of hot mashed potato and flour to roll. Mix all together well, roll and cut with a large cutter. Sprinkle with granulated sugar and bake in a hot oven.

Women Worth While

Madame Ibrahim Zia.

YOUNG, pretty and vivacious, Madame Ibrahim Zia is a smiling argument in favor of international marriages. She is the beloved daughter-in-law of Zia Facha, Turkish ambassador to the United States. More than this, she is an American and the first woman from any Turkish embassy or any Turkish family of high birth to go freely into society, to walk unveiled through the streets and to wear the latest styles from Paris.

Born of American parents, Madame Zia was educated abroad and made her debut in New York when she was nineteen years old. At twenty she was married to Ibrahim Zia, who is now second secretary of the Turkish embassy at Washington. At the time of Madame Zia's marriage, however, her husband was attached to the Turkish embassy at Rome. There, at the Italian capital, this young American was the only woman in the Ottoman envoy's household. When King Victor Emmanuel of Italy and his queen gave a great dinner in honor of Zia Facha, grand vizier of Turkey, Madame Zia entered the state dining room of the palace on the arm of the king. She wore a stately gown of silver brocade and jewels which, for all their splendor, could not rob her of her girlish charm. And she was frankly and undeniably American, with the merriment of extreme youthfulness, and the poise and dignity of the perfectly bred woman of whatever age or country.

At the time of her marriage, Madame Zia was an accomplished linguist, speaking French, German, Italian and Spanish. Since her marriage she has mastered her husband's tongue, with him as teacher. She is devoted to Oriental literature and philosophy and declares that she has read the Koran many times for the sheer joy that is to be had from a book of such transcendent literary beauty.

Once asked Madame Zia if she ever hoped to become a factor in the educating and broadening of Oriental women, her answer revealed an interesting viewpoint. "That question sounds typically like an American," she said. "In the American mind, or it may say the Anglo-Saxon mind, there is a misconception regarding the women of the Orient. Why, I always feel as if I had everything to learn from these women and pathetically little to teach them."

"The Oriental woman, instead of being a half-barbaric creature, as some believe is the flower of a civilization older and in many respects finer than that achieved by the Occident."

"Without a voice in public affairs the women of Turkey make themselves a powerful factor in those affairs."

There are so many ways of preparing winter vegetables and meat dishes that we should not be satisfied with a monotonous bill of fare in the winter time. A dainty dish need not take more time nor cost more than its plainer sister dish; in fact, they often are more economical.

The recipes that are run in today's talk space have all been tried and are easily within the capabilities of the everyday housekeeper and her income.

Creamed onions in sweet potato nests. Boil small white onions until tender, drain and arrange in a nest of sweet potato which has been mashed and seasoned to taste with salt, pepper and butter. Garnish with sprigs of parsley and just before serving pour over a cream sauce made as follows: Cream together one tablespoon each of flour and butter; add one cupful hot milk and cook until it thickens, stirring constantly. Remove from the fire, season to taste with salt and pepper and add one teaspoonful of finely minced parsley. This recipe can be tried without the parsley and will be found to be acceptable.

Oysters in Rice Cups. Cook together for five minutes two tablespoonfuls of chopped onions and the same amount of chopped green pepper. Add half a cupful of strained oyster juice, one teaspoonful of lemon juice, a tablespoonful of tomato catsup, one teaspoonful of prepared mustard, a dusting of cayenne and one pint of chopped oysters. Simmer for five minutes then fill the rice cups and serve very hot.

Onion Puffs. Make a light, flaky pie crust, roll thin and cut into squares. Take as many white onions as there are members in your family and boil them until they begin to grow tender (the onions, not the family) then remove from the stove, drain and let cool. When nearly cold take out the center and fill the space with some good sausage, pepper and salt and fold into a square of the pastry adding as much tomato dressing as it will hold. Bake in a moderate oven. When done serve individually with tomato sauce to which has been added a grating of cheese.

Escalloped Tongue. Chop some cold tongue, not too fine, and for each pint one tablespoonful of onion juice (obtained by grating an onion) one teaspoonful of chopped parsley, one cupful of bread-crumbs, half a cupful of stock or gravy, three tablespoonfuls of butter and a little salt. Butter a dish and cover the bottom with bread-crumbs. Put in the tongue mixed with the parsley, salt and pepper, then the stock with the onion juice in it. Put part of the butter in the dish with the remainder of the bread-crumbs and bake twenty minutes in brisk oven.

Rice Cups. Take two cupfuls of half-cooked rice and stir into it three tablespoonfuls of melted butter. Wet in cold water small molds or baking dinner coffee-cups. Fill with the rice and set aside until cold. When wanted, unmold and with a teaspoon remove the centers, leaving a shell of the rice, push inside and out with melted butter, place on a baking pan and put in hot oven until crisp and brown when they will be ready for filling.

THE PRICE SHE PAYS. There is hardly an American woman nowadays who can keep pace with the demands made upon her time and energy without paying the penalty of ill-health. It may be that dreadful backache, dragging pains, head aches, nervousness or the tortures of displacement. It is the price she pays. To women in this condition Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound comes as a boon and a blessing. A simple remedy made from roots and herbs which brings glorious health to suffering women.

SNUBBED BY RICH HUSBAND'S FAMILY

Dorothy Dale Howard.

Dorothy Dale, pretty chorus girl, who made something of a hit on Broadway a year or two ago, is going to return to the stage, following an unsuccessful attempt to bring into society in St. Louis. She married Richard J. Howard, the son of wealthy parents in the Missouri metropolis and he took her to his home town. But Howard's parents and relatives refused to take her in and her dream of social achievement was shattered.

TANGO GOWN IS THE LATEST WRINKLE

So much discussion has been raised against the tango that it has stirred up factions in every walk of life, and in the church and society. With it all, the tango seems to be growing in popularity, and special costumes are now much in evidence at tango dinners, lunches and teas. The tango gown shown above is a robe of violet satin over which is an embroidered tunic. The hair dressing consists of a cap of pearls from which is suspended a small aigrette.

DON'T TRUST CALOMEL

THOUSANDS EXPERIENCE BAD AFTER EFFECTS FROM THIS DANGEROUS DRUG.

A Safe Vegetable Substitute is Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets for the Liver.

Dr. F. M. Edwards, a prominent physician of Ohio, has discovered a safe, natural liver-toner in a combination of vegetable materials mixed with olive oil, which in effect almost exactly like calomel, except that there are none of the bad after effects.

Dr. Edwards has long been a foe of calomel, though he recognized its value along with its dangers. His distrust of the uncertain drug eventually started him, years ago, towards experiments with the view of discovering a substitute, and he has been for several years in possession of the long sought-for combination, which is the shape of a little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablet.

The results of 17 years' experience and practice are embodied in these marvelous little tablets.

They are called Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, and their effect on the liver has been the means of relieving many of Dr. Edwards' regular patients as well as to thousands of others who have suffered and were afraid of calomel.

There is no necessity, when you take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, by following them up with many, sickening griping salts, or castor oil as you do after taking calomel. Try them, 10c and 25c per box. The Olive Tablet Company, Columbus, O. All druggists.

Household Hints

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

Diced potatoes tossed up with mayonnaise makes a delicious filling for stuffed beef salad. Dress may be used for a garnish.

If you will first wash your kitchen table with sugar and then scrub it in the usual way all the stains will be removed.

When washing gilt decorated china never use washing soda, strong cleansing powders or soap.

If you will use equal parts of bay rum, glycerine and rose water on your hands it will keep them soft and white.

THE TABLE.

Milk Frosting.—One and one-half cups of sugar, one-half cup of milk, one teaspoonful of butter, one-half teaspoonful of vanilla. Put the butter in a sauce pan; when melted add the sugar and milk. Stir to be sure that the sugar does not adhere to the sauce pan, heat to boiling point and boil without stirring thirteen minutes. Remove from the fire and beat until of the right consistency to spread; then add flavoring and pour over the cake, spreading evenly with the back of a spoon. Crease as soon as it is firm.

Tomato Sauce.—One-third cup of butter, one onion finely chopped, three-quarters teaspoonful of salt, few grains of pepper, one small can of condensed tomato, two-thirds pound of lean beef. Cook the first four ingredients eight minutes. Add the tomato, one pint of water and the beef cut in small pieces and cook one and one-half hours. Remove the meat before serving.

Bean and Beet Salad.—Boil a half cupful of small kidney beans. You should have a cupful when cooked. Cook until soft a pint of tender string beans cut into inch lengths.

Boil tender four large or six small red beets. Let all get stone-cold. Cut the beets, then into tiny dice. In the center of a glass dish heap the beets, next the white beans, and as an outer circle the green. Edge with white heart lettuce leaves and pour a French dressing over all. If you use dried white beans they must be soaked for six hours before boiling.

Then He Didn't Want Them.

Dejectedly twirling his thumbs, the clerk sat in the box office of the Frivolity theater. A depressing air of failure hung over the theater, and it looked as though the piece would have to be withdrawn very shortly.

Suddenly he perked up as a countess and man and his wife came in, followed by their three daughters and two sons.

"Have you got seven seats in the middle of the second row for tonight?" asked the countess.

The box office man made a pretense of examining the plan of seats.

"Yes, I find they are vacant, sir," said he, trying to repress his excitement. "Shall I book them for you, sir?"

"Er—no, I think not," said the man from the country. "If you've got those seats on your hands it seems to me the play can't be up to much! Good morning!"

Somewhat Different. Sheridan, on being asked how he came to call Gibbon "luminous," answered: "I said so luminous."

TORTURED BY UGLY ITCHING ERUPTION

Doctor Recommended Resinol. Half of a 50c Jar Cured It.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 5, 1912.—"My little daughter was taken with a very small spot on the back of her hand. It grew larger and caused her more trouble. When she would scratch it, it would bleed and get very ugly looking. I doctored it myself for about a year, and at last it broke out on both knees, and when she would go to bed she would scratch, and was so tortured and suffered so from the itching, that I took her to our doctor, who recommended Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment.

"I sent for samples and after the first application the itching and inflammation was improved, and I kept it up night and morning, and by the time the sample was gone she complained very little, so I got a fifty-cent jar, and before that was half gone the trouble had entirely disappeared." (Signed) Mrs. Maude Schmechel, 2371 Presbury Street.

Resinol is speedily effective for itching, burning eruptions, pimples, dandruff, burns, old sores and piles. Sold by all druggists. For free samples write to Dept. 15-M, Resinol Chem. Co., Baltimore, Md.

AFTER FIVE YEARS

Winthrop Child Was Restored to Health by Vinol.

"Five years ago our little girl had a severe attack of diphtheria which left her subject to bronchitis and stomach trouble. She has been almost constantly under medical treatment. I have tried also two or three remedies containing cod liver oil but found her stomach rebelled against the oil. Reading your description of Vinol I decided to try it and did so with most astonishing results. I cannot begin to tell you how she has improved because you do not know what a little sufferer she was for five years. She has gained ten pounds since she commenced to take Vinol, and the story of what Vinol has done for her is only half told in this letter." Mrs. Adelaide Mulloy, Winthrop, Mass.

Vinol contains all the healing curative properties of cod liver oil, without the oil, and tonic iron added. That is why it helped this little girl after other remedies had failed.

We ask mothers of weak, sickly children to try Vinol on our offer to give back your money if it fails to help them. Smith Drug Co., Drug-Sists, Janesville, Wis.

P. S. Our Sazo Salve is truly wonderful for Eczema. We guarantee it.

Broadway Jones

From the Play of
George M. Cohan

With Photographs from Scenes in the Play

Copyright, 1913, by G. M. Cohan. Company
They were in a shady stretch or Main street, and, at night, a shady stretch of Main street, Jonesville, is about the darkest spot on earth outside of Africa.

"Let's stop right here, in the dark, till you get over it," said Wallace. "It's late, but there might be some madmen, joyous Jonesville roisterers to see if you went into the light."

"I mean every word of it. There are no roisterers in Jonesville; they're all honest workmen, horny-handed gum makers, toilers for the fortunes of my family. That's why I'm protecting them."

"The horny hand of some insane asylum guard will be upon your shoulder if you don't watch out."

"Ha, ha! Ha, ha!" laughed Broadway, somewhat cacklingly.
"I think you're going to be violent!" said Wallace. "He'll probably need both horny hands. But he'll subdue you. Now, try to give me some coherent notion of what's the matter with you, will you?"

"I've awakened to my duty."

"Time you did; you've had a nice long nap. What do you see, now you have aroused?"

"A pleasant little city, working happily at well-paid industry. I'm the paymaster. A great nation, wagging tireless jaws. They're chewing the Jones gum. Jones' gum, mind you; not some gum that the Consolidated puts up against the public as just as good as that my ancestors made famous. I see—"

"For heaven's sake, shut up! You'll see snakes if this keeps on. That menace that Mrs. Spotswood gave you has gone to your empty head."

"It was not the lemonade that Mrs. Spotswood gave me; it was the touching line of talk that—that Josie Richards gave me." He paused while Wallace waited with his jaw loose on its hinges. "Say, Bob, isn't she a queen?"

"So that's it?"
But he made no further protests. He was a level-headed youth, was this young advertising man. He knew as well as anyone that if the trust feared and wished to purchase the Jones gum it could be because the trust knew that the Jones gum was a dangerous competitor. If managed as it had been, unadvertised, it had been a dangerous competitor to the trust, then it was worth having—emphatically worth keeping.

And some day Broadway must do something. He could not forever play the idler on the Great White Way, even if his millions were unnumbered. It was no life for an actual man, and Bob was sure that hidden somewhere in his friend were the true elements of worthy manhood. Nothing had occurred to bring them out, that was all. He thought they might be coming now.

Reaching the hotel, they found the place in utter darkness. Not a light, even turned down for the night, was visible at any window; not a sound of life came from the building save a rhythmic cadence of some sleeper softly sawing wood with a dull saw.

"The clerk's asleep," said Bob.
"How do you know that is the clerk?" asked Broadway, listening critically to the snore.

"I heard him singing when I first got here, and now I recognize the voice. He held the tune a little better, then, that's all."

"Have we got to wake him up?"

"Sure! Why, it's after eleven o'clock!"

Nothing but the thought of Josie Richards' eyes could have kept Broadway at that instant from casting all his worthy resolutions to the winds, selling to the trust and searching out a Bible upon which to swear that he never again would set foot in Jonesville. But he did remember Josie's eyes, and so began to hammer on the door.

After a quarter of an hour of steady hammering, some snubbing and a little whistling, he was rewarded by a sleepy and ill-tempered voice from a slowly opened window.

"Heavens! Was his window closed! And yet that snore got out to us!"

"It saved its way out," Bob suggested.

"Well, what ye want?" the angry voice inquired.

"Want to get in."

"At this time the night?"

"Sure. It's always night before we ever want to go to bed."

"Well, the Grand hotel, it don't think much of folks that stays out all night long. I'll tell you that!" the clerk exclaimed, as he came down in bright flannels (and not much of that) to let them in.

"All night long!"

"Ain't it a quarter after eleven?"

After telephoning Rankin (much to the clerk's disgust) to hurry to Connecticut by the first train in the morning, with well-packed bags, the two friends crept upstairs, abashed.

The clerk scorned such a menial service as attending them, and, in the excitement left from the rebuke he had received, Wallace stumbled into the wrong room. All doors were partly open, for the night was warm, and no one feared the midnight interloper, there in innocent and simple Jonesville.

Fortunately the moonlight fell upon the bed, and warned him, otherwise there might have been a scandal in Gum Village, in which case the complainant (he felt certain from that hurried glimpse) would have been a sylph of close upon two hundred and fifty pounds.

Wallace made an effort to sit up and discuss things further with Broadway, who seemed to be entirely awake, though dreamy in a strange, unwonted way, but there were two arguments against this. The first that gnats and moths swarmed merrily in as soon as the oil lamp was lighted, bringing with them more than one mosquito; the second, being that he was worn out after a long night full of various excitements.

"I'm going to bed," he finally decided.

"Best place for you, Bob, this time of night. Folks who sit up—"

"Oh, shut up! Good night!"

"Good night. See you in the morning."

"Now, why," asked Wallace, after he had left his friend, "did that boy seem so glad to have me go to bed? He acted just as if he wanted to kneel down and pray, but couldn't while a vulgar herd like me was looking on. Now, what the devil?"

He got into bed.

Broadway did not go to bed. Instead he found a pen and ink, and some of the soft, spongy hotel stationery in a drawer of the bare washstand. He began work with them slowly, painfully.

The pen soon falling, he dug from a corner of a pocket in his vest the pencil of which he had been so proud when Pembroke had called on him, and continued. After an hour's hard labor for his brain, the pencil, the soft paper and the tongue which he continually thrust into his cheek, he had completed what he thought a masterpiece. He was not sure whether he would speak it, the next day, to Josie, by herself, or to the assembled multitude of the mill's employees, but he was certain it was great.

Having written it he spent another hour in carefully committing it to memory (or so he fondly thought) and then got into bed.

An hour later he tried to sleep the night out sitting up for the bed was such as he had never even read about. When, at last, he fell into a posture less suggestive of repose on garden rakes and hose than any other had been, he dreamed horrid dreams of broken-hearted villagers, starving in the streets of Jonesville in such terrible profusion that the newspapers referred to it as "Bonesville" and declared that he had proved to be the chief industrial pirate of his day, ruling, in the fourth generation, a fine, family name which had, for three, stood for probity, humanity, industry and the best chewing gum of all.

He suffered terribly as he imagined these grim things and a dozen times was attacked by reporters who became so incensed as they wrote their stories of his villainy that they strove to stab him with their lead pencils; a hundred times was set upon by famishing villagers who wished to pick his ribs with fang-like teeth; a thousand times found himself stark and shivering before the bar of justice in a chilly stretch of space, where the specters of all worthy Joneses of the past confronted him with slim, accusing fingers, pointed straight at his terror-stricken stomach.

The dreams were not true nightmares, though, for at the supreme instant of each period of peril a white angel floated to him, rescuing him from that which threatened him.

And this white angel, graceful, large-eyed, smiling and beneficent, was always Josie Richards. As soon as she had rescued him each time, he spoke his speech to her, and she wept on his shoulder.

The result of such a night of agony was, naturally, that they slept later in the morning than was the Jonesville custom. When half past eight arrived and they had not appeared, the wife of the proprietor sent him upstairs to see if they had not decamped without paying for their rooms, or if, perchance, they had not come there suicidally inclined.

She crept up behind her liege lord fearfully and peeped across his shoulder as he opened each unlocked door in turn. Finding that they were both peacefully asleep, she was both shocked at the lack of tragedy, so she snorted, "Scandalous!" as she crashed down each step.

She was a very solid woman, widely built. Wallace had noticed that the night before when he had peeped in through the door. Had she been aware of that terrific episode, she would have screamed for the village constable and had him locked up in the calaboose.

Broadway had his high triumphant moment when it became apparent that Wallace would of necessity go to the village barber shop. Having come away in flight from Mrs. Gerard without bags or luggage of whatever kind, he had no razor with him.

"My whiskers are so whitish that they will not begin to show until the afternoon!" Broadway exclaimed. "By that time Rankin will be here with bags."

"I'll wait for him. I won't see any—"

"You'll be sure to see the judge's daughter. All the Jonesville girls that work at the gum factory get up at six o'clock. The idle, aristocratic class, like Clara, stay in bed till seven."

"Well, where is it, then?" said Wallace in an evil temper.

"What? The village barber shop? Next door." Broadway wrung his hand. "Good-by old chap; good-by. I'll—"

"Just give my love to Broadway," Wallace begged.

Jackson Jones grew sober in an instant. "I don't expect I'll see much of it for a while."

"It must be permanent!" said Wallace. "It has lasted through the longest night the world has ever known."

The day already was well under way at the Jones factory. Josie had been at her managerial desk not less than an hour and probably an hour and a half when Wallace started for the barber shop.

It was a very trying morning for the girl. The events of the night before had much upset her, and her sleep had been as much disturbed as Broadway's, although, perhaps, less physically painful.

She had been terribly in earnest in everything which she had said to him about his duty to the village which had made him rich, his duty to the family whose name he bore, his duty to himself, she had been intensely worried, still was intensely worried, lest all which she had said might go for naught, failing to impress him permanently.

He had doubtless meant well when he left her, but would that good intention stand the test of Wallace's ridicule (she felt certain Wallace would oppose her plan) and his own contemplation of the future for a night?

She had a hazy notion of what the life of idle rich youth in New York must be, but imagined that it must attract with vivid power, and she could guess that Jonesville did not. Would he hold firm in the determination which she felt sure he had formed?

When the judge came in he found her wondering and worrying as she waited for some papers she had sent a clerk to get. Already she had almost finished the statement of affairs which she had promised to give Broadway.

"Well, I just came over from the Grand hotel," the judge began.

"Did you see the young man?"

"Only for a minute." The judge laughed indulgently. "He was eating breakfast in his room, and his valet had just borrowed some hot flat-irons and was pressing out his clothes. The judge's laughter became very hearty."

Even Josie smiled; but the fact that they had brought a valet with them was a bit of news to her. She expressed surprise.

The judge laughed again. "Oh, he just got here this morning. It seems they both came off without any baggage, so they telephoned the valet, late last night, to bring them on some clothes."

Baby had the grip-coughed badly, BUT FATHER JOHN'S MEDICINE CURED

Grateful Mother Writes an Interesting Letter.

HOW TO KEEP THE CHILDREN WELL AND STRONG.

In a recent letter from Central Falls, a grateful mother says: "My little child was very sick with the grip and would cough all night. Father John's Medicine was the best medicine for him, and it did him good. He could not go without it." (Signed) Mrs. Phoebe Gregoire, 17 Phillips street, Central Falls, R. I.

Mothers should remember that Father John's Medicine is safe for children as well as older people because it is free from alcohol or dangerous drugs in any form. It cures colds and coughs, builds new strength and flesh because it is a pure and wholesome food medicine.

If you have a child in securing Father John's Medicine from your druggist, write to Father John's Medicine, Lowell, Mass., enclosing $1.00 for a large bottle by express prepaid.

Dinner Stories

Andrew's grandmother had been telling him Bible stories, his favorite being that of Daniel in the lion's den. At the age of four he was taken to a circus for the first time. When the lion tamer put his head into the lion's mouth Andrew's excitement knew no bounds. Jumping up and down he gleefully screamed: "Say, that knocks the spots off Daniel!"

"Young Wagglies," remarked Flipson, as he made himself comfortable in a deep club armchair, "has had the laugh turned on himself in his little joke against the Flames Fire Insurance Company."

"What do you mean?" asked Flipson.

"Well," continued his friend, "he insured five hundred cigars, smoked them, and then sent in a claim on the ground that they had been destroyed by fire."

"And of course he got laughed at?"

"Not a bit of it. The company has had him arrested on a charge of arson."

They were discussing horse racing. "I guess," observed the Yankee, "I've seen the closest race ever run, for I once saw a horse adjudged winner by a tongue's length."

"Is that so?" drawled the Englishman. "Well, I've seen a closer race than that. I lived two years in Scotland."

FORTY YEARS AGO

The Janesville Gazette, Jan. 26, 1874.—A team of horses was stolen from the Wm. Bradley (Janney) farm from the barn of Wm. Bradley of Indian Ford on Saturday night, together with a good double harness and a new heavily ironed unpainted cutter.

The Madison papers are quarreling over Samuel Hubbel of this city who was fined $25 and costs and went to jail in default of payment. The Journal avers that he is a reformer, while the Democrat says he is a republican. It is hard to tell what Samuel's politics are just now, but we should say he acted very much like a reformer while in Madison.

A most pleasing reception was given in Chicago to Mr. and Mrs. W. Lowell at their residence, No. 684 West Adams street in January of Miss Alice Hayner of Janesville, Wis. The music and refreshments were fine and the party a merry one. Among the young ladies present were: Miss Hattie Dean, Miss Castle, Miss Barton, Miss Emma Lovejoy, Miss Rowley, Misses Hattie and Fannie Wright, Miss Brown, Miss Leonard, Miss Ford, Miss Griffen, Miss Thompson, Miss Williamson, Miss Stoffel, Miss Fannie Brown, Miss Louer, and Miss Finkel.

The last session of the State Grange in this city cost that body $2,000. The hotel bills aggregated $1,602.

THE HOD CARRIER

By GEORGE FITCH, Author of "At Good Old Slawash."

The hod carrier is a man who not only rises in life but carries a brick building with him.

Alas! got a good deal of notoriety once because he was supposed to hold the world on his shoulders. The hod carrier goes him one better. He has painfully juggled most of the buildings of the world up a ladder on his shoulders. He is a shining illustration of what can be done by perseverance. The hod carrier uses a small hod which a college strong man could fill with bricks and carry as a bouquet. The hod carrier also moves so slowly that the direction in which he is moving sometimes has to be determined with a surveyor's instrument. And yet, when he has finished his work and gone away to annoy a new set of brick layers by arriving just a minute too late with his load, the huge pile of bricks on the ground has disappeared and a new building has elbowed its way into the landscape.

The hod carrier does not need any particular education in his work. What he requires is a pair of broad, indomitable shoulders and a backbone of reinforced concrete. Many a man who, when the English language is a sealed book and who uses three syllabled words as if they were red hot and dangerous can carry three tons of brick up three flights of rickety scaffolding in eight hours with perfect technique. What is more, he can support a family of eleven on the proceeds. This is where the hod carrier makes his nearest approach to genius. Those prosperous citizens who are slowly worrying off the excess baggage beneath their belts, over the high price of eggs should appoint a commission to study the hod carrier. Barring a little kicking now and then about the high cost of anything, but goes right on producing future congressmen and captains of industry with or without the assistance of the tariff.

This is because the hod carrier requires little to make him happy. After spending the day beneath the uncompromising corner of a hod which sometimes weighs as much as 500 pounds by 5 o'clock in the afternoon he regards a plain wooden chair and a pipe in the evening as the height of luxury—whereas the man who works all day in a $76 mahogany chair on a $300 Turkish rug can hardly enjoy his well-earned rest in the evening without the assistance of an orchestra and a million dollars' worth of attractive society on either side of him. And yet there is no great rush of eager applicants for the hod carrier's job, and no one envies him—not even the man who works 18 hours a day in order to earn $75,000 a year for the support of an $85,000 family which refuses to come home from Europe. Envy is a curious thing.

Stop That Cough In A Minute
 Would you give morphine or chloroform to your baby or take it yourself? Of course not. Yet most patent cough cures contain one or both. They stop a cough in a minute, which is dangerous. A cough should be cured internally by healing the lungs, loosening the phlegm, throwing it out, which is done by coughing. Badger Cough Balsam does not contain morphine or chloroform. It is made by perspiration from bloodroot, lobelia, pine bark, wild cherry, etc. It cures a cough in a few days without harming the lungs with poisonous phlegm. The irritation is relieved, the lungs healed without danger of pneumonia. It's safe for children or old people. Get a bottle today for 25 cents. Badger Cough Balsam is made by Mr. Fleming, our Graduate Pharmacist and Chemist. Badger Drug Co., Milwaukee and River St.

New Variety of Burglar.
 Mathusaw awoke the other morning to find, to his surprise, that there is one type of burglar which has never been branded and labeled. Heretofore it was supposed that a specimen of every form of burglar was on file at headquarters, but no record was found of the burglar who skins the silverware and cash and confines himself to cold cream, talcum powder and military brushes. —New York Herald.

Advice to Airships.
 It is not the slightest good to do a brilliant and original thing once. You have got to repeat the performance until the people get used to it. Otherwise you are as one before your time, which is about equivalent to not being there at all. —London Dispatch.
